SOUTHERN CROSS HOPS OFF FOR FIJI ISLANDS

PASS UP CHANCE TO LAND ON THE PHOENIX ISLANDS

KINGSFORD-SMITH HAD INDICATED SUNDAY HE MIGHT STOP THERE IF NECESSARY

MESSAGE RECEIVED SAID PLANE WAS 2,000 MILES OUT.

WEATHER FAIR

Honolulu, June 4.—The trans-Pacific plane Southern Cross was bucking headwinds at 9:30 A. M. Honolulu time (12 noon P. S. T.) today.

The winds delayed somewhat the progress of the plane, which for hours had maintained a speed of approximately 100 miles an hour on its flight from Hawaii to Suva in the Fiji Islands.

The plane at that hour was attempting to obtain compass bearings from ships so that it could give the distance yet to be traveled to reach Suva.

It was believed the Southern Cross was between 2,550 and 2,600 miles out from the Hawaiian Islands, leaving about 500 miles yet to go to reach Suva.

The last time the plane checked its position with ships was at 6:20 A. M., when it reported "810 miles to go."

Honolulu, June 4.—(UP)—A faint message saying "all is well" was picked up from the trans-Pacific plane Southern Cross at 5:30 A. M. today, Honolulu time (8 A. M. Pacific coast standard time).

The message was reported by the Mutual Wireless Co., which has followed the plane from its take-off from Barking Sands Sunday.

The Southern Cross was so far from Honolulu that communication was becoming exceedingly difficult.

Later messages from Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and his companions on the flight to Suva were expected to be relayed from radio stations in the South Sea Islands.

The estimated distance of the Southern Cross from Honolulu at 5:30 A. M. was approximately 2,200 miles.

At 5:30 A. M. the Southern Cross had been in the air slightly more than 24 hours. The take-off from Barking Sands was at 5:20 A. M. Sunday.

The plane was considerably more than two-thirds of the distance along the 3,138-mile air line from Barking Sands to Suva at that hour.

If the plane maintains the speed it was making at that hour, it was believed it would reach Suva between 2:30 and 3:30 P. M. Honolulu time (5 and 6 P. M. Pacific coast standard time) today.

Honolulu, June 4.—(UP)—Two thousand miles of water never before flown over by an airplane lay behind the Southern Cross early today on its flight from Hawaii to Suva, in the Fiji Islands.

On the log of the flight kept from radio reports broadcast by the plane were recorded hours of trouble and anxiety, but the latest word was that "everything is okay and the weather is fine."

For fully six hours, the longest period since their take-off early Sunday, there had been no hint of trouble of any kind in the radio messages.

At 3:30 A. M. today Honolulu time (6 A. M. Pacific coast standard time), the estimated position of the plane from its latest report was 2,000 miles out of the island of Kauai, where a start was made at 5:20 A. M. Sunday morning.

Shortly after 2 A. M. the Southern Cross was over the Phoenix group of islands, mere dots in the wide expanse of the southern Pacific.

The tiny islands were the first land the plane had been near since the departure from the Hawaiian group.

Radio messages told of passing Canton Island, in the Phoenix group shortly before 2 A. M., at an average speed of nearly 100 miles an hour.

Canton Island was to have been the landing place for the plane in event of emergency or if the crew decided it would be impossible for the giant tri-motored Fokker monoplane to make the Fiji Islands with its supply of gasoline.

The Southern Cross carried nearly 1,400 gallons of gasoline in its main tanks and a few additional gallons in emergency tanks when it left Barking Sands, on island of Kauai.

Trio Start Trans-Atlantic Flight to England

ELECTION SUPPLIES APPORTIONED TO 87 COUNTIES

St. Paul, June 4.—(UP)—Election supplies for the June 18 primary with instructions for their use in nine foreign languages, were sent out to the 87 counties today by Mike Holm, secretary of state.

Holm also sent notice to candidates to file their campaign expenses or their names will not appear on the ballots.

Precincts this year number more than last year. Instruction pamphlets besides those in English include: German, Swedish, Norwegian, French, Polish, Bohemian, Finnish and Russian.

2 MINNEAPOLIS WOMEN KILLED, 4 OTHERS HURT

TWIN CITIES AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS OVER THE WEEK-END

LITTLE MARY LOUISE RUDD BELIEVED TO BE SERIOUSLY INJURED

St. Paul, June 4.—(UP)—Two Minneapolis women were killed and four others were injured in the Twin Cities by automobile accidents over the week-end.

Mrs. William N. Barazin and Miss Lauretta Hall, 23, were the women killed.

Mrs. Barazin was struck by a light coupe in front of her own home while crossing the street. A second car hit her before she could be removed from her dangerous position. She died in a hospital.

Miss Hall, a maid, was said to have been struck down when she ran into the path of an approaching automobile. Miss Hall died shortly after she was taken to General Hospital.

Among the injured only Mary Louise Rudd, 2, of Minneapolis, was believed seriously hurt. The child was struck by a delivery truck. The driver was held.

Shot Seeking Control of Auto Garage Racket

Chicago, June 4.—(UP)—Dave Ablin, 35, was shot and seriously wounded today, presumably in the war for control of the automobile garage racket.

Ablin is president of the Midwest Garage Association, an organization which assesses dues from garage owners for permission to operate their business houses.

No estimate of the remaining supply of gasoline was given as the Southern Cross sped past the Phoenix group of islands.

The Southern Cross was making a speed of approximately 100 miles an hour during the early stages of the flight, a speed slightly better than that of the trip from Oakland Airport to Honolulu.

Trade winds to the back of the plane helped carry it along over the wide expanse of the Pacific.

Honolulu, T. H., June 4.—Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith and his three companions aboard the airplane Southern Cross passed up their first chance to land today while enroute from Honolulu to Suva in the Fiji Islands—the longest over-water flight ever undertaken.

At 2 A. M. the plane was passing over the Phoenix island group, having flown one degree and 36 minutes south and 42 minutes west of Canton Island, where Kingsford-Smith had indicated before leaving here on Sunday that he might land if necessary.

Sydney, Australia, June 4.—With the monoplane Southern Cross more than half way across the Pacific ocean from the United States, indications today were that Australians would not sleep much until it arrives.

Already elaborate preparations have been made to greet the Australian war ace who is at the helm of the tri-motored Fokker monoplane.

Bert Hinkler, famous Australian aviator, has made arrangements to fly off the coast of Australia to greet the trans-oceanic flyers.

GEORGE LA FOND TODAY NAMED CHIEF DEPUTY

CHANGE SLATED IN OFFICE OF STATE TREASURER'S OFFICE

NEW APPOINTEE IS BROTHER OF EDITOR EDWARD LA FOND

St. Paul, June 4.—George LaFond, chief accountant in the state treasurer's office, today was appointed chief state deputy in the same office, by Julius Schmahl, state treasurer, effective July 1, following the dismissal of Henry J. Hadlich, for "incompetency."

St. Paul, June 4.—(UP)—George LaFond, formerly of Little Falls, Minn., chief accountant in the state treasurer's office, was expected today to be appointed chief deputy following the dismissal of Henry J. Hadlich, by Julius Schmahl, state treasurer, for "incompetency."

LaFond, brother of Edward LaFond, editor of the Little Falls Transcript, and an uncle of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, has been a member of the treasurer's staff for more than 26 years.

Schmahl was said to have dismissed Hadlich for "political intermeddling," in addition to the charges of incompetency.

The former chief deputy denied that he had played politics during his service in the treasury office and pointed to his previous record as an accountant to refute the incompetency charge.

Hadlich will leave office July 1.

CLAIM 4 ALLEGED GAMBLING PLACES OPENED IN MILL CITY

Minneapolis, June 4.—(UP)—Information concerning four alleged gambling establishments that have been opened in the loop district here since the dismissal of Frank W. Brunsell, former chief of police, today were given Mayor George E. Leach by officers of the Hennepin County Law Enforcement League.

Following the institution of an investigation by the league, two persons were said to have been arrested on liquor charges, a gambling house raided and gambling devices seized in a miniature city cleanup late Sunday.

Action to be taken on the report presented by the enforcement league was not announced. Chief Brunsell was discharged two weeks ago for "personal disloyalty" to the mayor.

WHEAT RISES SHARPLY ON REPORTS OF DRY CONDITIONS

Chicago, June 4.—(UP)—Continual reports of dryness over the American northwest sent wheat sharply higher late in the day on the board of trade today, but near the close much of the gain was lost as profit-taking developed. Corn recovered partially from an opening break, while oats closed irregular.

At the close wheat was up  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  cents; corn had lost  $\frac{3}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  cents and oats ranged from  $\frac{1}{4}$  cent gain to  $\frac{1}{2}$  cent loss. Provisions closed higher.

DAWES, LIKE COOLIDGE, TO GO FISHING

Chicago, June 4.—(UP)—Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, like President Coolidge, plans to spend his vacation fishing.

Avoiding politics as much as possible, Dawes will pass a quiet summer at his home in Evanston, he said. He plans to go west for a few weeks, however, to fish.

The vice-president will not go to Kansas City for the republican national convention, he said.

COOLIDGE MAY GIVE ADVICE ON THE PLATFORM

MESSAGE TO BE DELIVERED AT GOVERNMENT BUDGET MEETING JUNE 11

ADDRESS TO BE MADE NIGHT BEFORE FORE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION OPENS

Washington, June 4.—(UP)—Politicians here were speculating on the possible inclusion by President Coolidge of advice to republican platform builders in his message at the government budget meeting on June 11.

The address will be made here the night before opening of the republican convention at Kansas City. It has been pointed out this would be the psychological moment for the president to express his views on certain issues that are bound to come before the platform committee itself.

Mr. Coolidge is expected to include in his budget message a plea for continued economy, which in turn would be passed along to those evolving the party's platform. Under this general heading would come the $222,000,000 tax reduction program and also the mooted farm relief question.

In his budget message December 9, the president emphasized that the minimum cost of running the government had been reached, and that the normal expansion of the nation would call for larger expenditures in the future.

Should the president express himself on the farm relief question, as he easily might do in connection with the question of curtailed expenses, administration supporters look for the admonition that the party adopt a farm policy in harmony with the views that induced the McNary-Haugen veto.

That the president would use his message as a means of throwing a new light on the "draft Coolidge" movement is doubted.

SAID HE WOULD TRY TO LAND SOME OF AIR-RAIL TRAFFIC

New York, June 4.—(UP)—The Hutchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad joined the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., to "keep up with the procession," W. B. Storey, president of the railroad, said today.

"We thought it would be better to get what we could out of the traffic than to have an all air service across the continent giving us no traffic," he said.

The Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., will combine railroad and plane service between New York and San Francisco.

Litchfield Chemical Company Incorporated

St. Paul, June 4.—(UP)—Articles of incorporation were filed with Mike Holm, secretary of state, today by the Anderson Chemical Co., Litchfield. The $100,000 concern will handle chemical compounds, stock remedies and dairy products.

SOUGHT TO BOMB HIS SPECIAL TRAIN

CHANG AND SEVERAL OF HIS AIDES WERE IN- JURED

15 CARS ON TRAIN, THREE WERE WRECKED BY THE EX- PLOSION

Mukden, China, June 4.—(UP)—Manchurian soldiers were concentrated within the walled city today after an attempt had been made on the life of Chang Tso Lin, retiring dictator of the north China government, by bombing his special train.

Chang and several of his aides were injured. Several guards were killed. The injury to the Manchurian war-lord was said not to be serious, although he was injured in the forehead.

Two nationalist spies were shot and killed by Japanese soldiers, who helped in restoring order to the panic-stricken city.

Dynamiting of the train carrying the Manchurian war-lord—a special train chartered to bring Chang in retreat from Peking—occurred at 5:30 A. M. today in one of the suburbs of the city near the Lao To Kao railroad bridge, the junction of the Southern Manchurian and the Peking-Mukden railroads.

A bomb exploded as the train approached. There were 15 cars on the train and three were wrecked by the bomb, including the car on which Chang and his advisers rode.

Several guards, riding on the train to protect Chang, were killed.

The explosion and disaster that followed Chang's sudden departure from Peking brought panic to the city. The detonation of the big bomb was loud and townspeople became greatly excited when it was learned that Chang's train had been wrecked.

Machine gunners started firing soon after the explosion and there was some fighting between the northern guards and Japanese railway guardsmen. The railroad bridge was set afire, adding to the general confusion.

Japanese troops brought up reinforcements and succeeded in quieting the situation.

London, June 4.—Thirty persons in civilian dress, alleged to be southern nationalist soldiers, were killed when machine gunners started firing immediately after Chang Tso Lin's train had been wrecked at Mukden, Tokio advices to the Exchange Telegraph said today.

(Direct dispatches to the United Press from Mukden said that machine gunners had started shooting at random after the bomb explosion but were quieted after a few skirmishes with Japanese railroad guards. There were no indications of casualties in those clashes.)

Peking, China, June 4.—This northern capital today calmly awaited new developments of the Chinese civil situation—probably the peaceful occupancy of the city by southern nationalist troops.

There have been few demonstrations since Chang Tso Lin, dictator of affairs for the past five years, rode smilingly through the streets in an armored car yesterday and started his retreat back to Manchuria. He had left an interim government in charge and had made arrangements for the gendarmes to maintain order.

Today there was quiet, although it was a quiet mixed with uneasiness as to what the next steps might be. Generals Chang Hsue Hsiang and Yang Yu Ting, remaining of the northern forces that Chang Tso Lin controlled, have decided to maintain their armies at a point 30 miles south of Peking.

It was believed these generals would attempt to convey to the nationalist leaders the demands of the northern residents that a peoples' government be formed.

SAYS REPUBLICANS TO FEEL EFFECT OF FARM BILL VETO

Wright City, Mo., June 4.—(UP)—President John F. Case of the Missouri state board of agriculture issued a statement here last night warning that President Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill "may prove devastating to the republican party."

"The matter will not down," he said. "It must be fought out on the convention floors at Kansas City and Houston, and the final message will be written in when the farmers vote next November. 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned,' Shakespeare once said. The republican party may find out that the fury of farmers scorned is devastating." Case is a republican.

SEARCH FOR NOBILE WIDENS, MORE SEARCHING

NEW RESCUE PARTIES TO WORK IN THE NORTHERN REGIONS

DOG TEAMS WITH EXPERT GUIDES STRIKE OUT OVER FROZEN WASTES

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 4.—(UP)—The search for General Umberto Nobile and his crew of the polar dirigible Italia widened today with arrival of new rescue parties in the northern regions where the Italia is believed to have landed.

Dog teams struck out over the frozen, ice bound territory, guided by expert guides, and will go inland in hopes of rescuing the Italian explorer and his aides who have been missing for 10 days. They have hopes of finding the crew alive—possibly beating back through the trail-less land towards Kings Bay.

The whaler Braganza, chartered by the Italian government, is proceeding north and advised the base here that she had passed Amsterdam Island shortly after midnight.

The vessel reported she was heading eastward from the island but that the ice was becoming more dense. Ice thus far has not blocked the vessel.

Meanwhile other relief expeditions—including the great program planned by the Norwegian government—were understood to be either in the north or starting towards that zone. Some of these expeditions carry airplanes which will be sent out of a central point on scouting tours.

A forlorn note was carried out today when the crew of the Clitta Di Milano, the relief vessel, dismantled the big hangar that had been awaiting the return of the dirigible Italia from its cruise to the north pole.

POLICE CHIEFS MEET AT MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis, June 4.—(UP)—The sixth annual convention of the Minnesota Police association opened here today for the usual two day meeting.

Edward Brick, former St. Cloud chief of police and present association president, occupied the chair.

Speakers included: Attorney General G. A. Youngquist and Frank W. Matson, of the state railroad and warehouse commission.

U. S. MARINE DIES OF SELF-INFLICTED WOUND

Washington, June 4.—(UP)—Corporal B. Leonard K. Besch of the American marine forces in Haiti died today of self-inflicted gunshot wounds, the navy department was advised. His father, Max H. Besch, resides at 3033 Minnehaha avenue, Minneapolis.

QUEEN MARIE OF ROUMANIA TO REVISIT AMERICA

Bucharest, Roumania, June 4.—(UP)—Queen Marie will revisit the United States within a few months to see friends, she announced today while receiving Leon Fischer, president of the Association of Roumanian Jews in the United States.

MISS EARMART, SKILLED AVIATOR, IN THE PARTY

WEATHER CONDITIONS EXCEL- LENT AS THEY LEFT HALIFAX

NO PREVIOUS ANNOUNCEMENT MADE OF THEIR PLANS

Halifax, N. S., June 4.—(UP)—Miss Amelia Earmart of Boston, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon took off at 8:30 A. M. EST, today for Trepassy Bay, Newfoundland, to start their trans-Atlantic flight to England. Weather conditions were excellent.

St. Johns, N. F., June 4.—After a fast flight from Halifax, the seaplane Friendship landed at Trepassy Bay at noon E. S. T. today with Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, ready to continue to London.

Halifax, N. S., June 4.—Three persons—including one of America's prominent women aviators—awaited today for favorable weather to start a challenge of the north Atlantic in a flight from Newfoundland to London.

Miss Amelia Earmart, Boston; Wilmer Stultz, at times pilot for Charles A. Levine and once pilot for Mrs. Frances Grayson, and Lew Gordon flew here yesterday from Boston in the big Fokker airplane they had purchased from Commander Richard E. Byrd. The plane is one Byrd had intended using on his south polar expedition this fall.

Without a previous announcement of plans the trio boarded the airplane at Boston yesterday, flew direct to Halifax and started making plans to fly on to Trepassy, 80 miles southwest of St. John's. From there the start to London will be made and it is probable they will fly to Trepassy today.

The Byrd plane is equipped with pontoons and it is understood the purpose of the flight is to further studies in the possibility of regular trans-Atlantic crossings.

The plane is so equipped that it may be able to land on the water should trouble develop.

The harbor at Trepassy is excellent for a water take-off, it was said here. It is wide and the water sufficiently calm so as not to spoil the tri-ling.

When the Fokker machine arrives there it will be equipped with 1,000 gallons of gasoline and prepared for an immediate start. The flyers hope to land in the river Thames.

The plane when fully equipped—including the three pilots, gasoline, food supplies and radio equipment—will weigh approximately 12,000 pounds.

Secrecy surrounded the flight of the Fokker from Boston, when the machine left Boston there was no indication of destination.

There were a number of people here to welcome the plane upon its arrival but it was more than an hour later that Stultz finally confirmed the three were enroute to London.

Boston, June 4.—Miss Amelia Earhart, co-pilot on the projected trans-Atlantic flight from Trepassy, is one of the most experienced women flyers in the United States and has been flying ten years.

At present she is a teacher of flying and director of the Denison airport at Framingham, Mass.

She started flying ten years ago in southern California and in 1920—when she was 21 years old—established an altitude record for women at 14,999 feet.

New York, June 4.—The secrecy of the trans-Atlantic flight of the Fokker airplane from Boston was kept so well that Mrs. Wilmer Stultz, who watched the take-off, did not know her husband intended to fly to England.

She said at Mineola, L. I., that she thought her husband was going to Newfoundland in a test flight for Commander Richard E. Byrd. Meanwhile in New York Byrd confirmed sale of the plane. The plane is understood to have been sold for $60,000.

The address will be made here the night before opening of the republican convention at Kansas City. It has been pointed out this would be the psychological moment for the president to express his views on certain issues that are bound to come before the platform committee itself.

Mr. Coolidge is expected to include in his budget message a plea for continued economy, which in turn would be passed along to those evolving the party's platform. Under this general heading would come the $222,000,000 tax reduction program and also the mooted farm relief question.

In his budget message December 9, the president emphasized that the minimum cost of running the government had been reached, and that the normal expansion of the nation would call for larger expenditures in the future.

Should the president express himself on the farm relief question, as he easily might do in connection with the question of curtailed expenses, administration supporters look for the admonition that the party adopt a farm policy in harmony with the views that induced the McNary-Haugen veto.

That the president would use his message as a means of throwing new light on the "draft Coolidge" movement is doubted.

SAID HE WOULD TRY TO LAND SOME OF AIR-RAIL TRAFFIC

New York, June 4.—(U.P.)—The Hutchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad joined the Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., to "keep up with the procession," W. B. Storey, president of the railroad, said today.

"We thought it would be better to get what we could out of the traffic than to have an all air service across the continent giving us no traffic," he said.

The Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., will combine railroad and plane service between New York and San Francisco.

Litchfield Chemical Company Incorporated

St. Paul, June 4.—(U.P.)—Articles of incorporation were filed with Mike Holm, secretary of state, today by the Anderson Chemical Co., Litchfield. The $100,000 concern will handle chemical compounds, stock remedies and dairy products.

SOUGHT TO BOMB HIS SPECIAL TRAIN

CHANG AND SEVERAL OF HIS AIDES WERE IN- JURED

15 CARS ON TRAIN, THREE WERE WRECKED BY THE EX- PLOSION

Mukden, China, June 4.—(U.P.)—Manchurian soldiers were concentrated within the walled city today after an attempt had been made on the life of Chang Tso Lin, retiring dictator of the north China government, by bombing his special train.

Chang and several of his aides were injured. Several guards were killed. The injury to the Manchurian war-lord was said not to be serious, although he was injured in the forehead.

Two nationalist spies were shot and killed by Japanese soldiers, who helped in restoring order to the panic-stricken city.

Dynamiting of the train carrying the Manchurian war-lord—a special train chartered to bring Chang in retreat from Peking—occurred at 5:30 A. M. today in one of the suburbs of the city near the Lao To Kao railroad bridge, the junction of the Southern Manchurian and the Peking-Mukden railroads.

A bomb exploded as the train approached. There were 15 cars on the train and three were wrecked by the bomb, including the car on which Chang and his advisers rode.

Several guards, riding on the train to protect Chang, were killed.

The explosion and disaster that followed Chang's sudden departure from Peking brought panic to the city. The detonation of the big bomb was loud and townspeople became greatly excited when it was learned that Chang's train had been wrecked.

Machine gunners started firing soon after the explosion and there was some fighting between the northern guards and Japanese railway guardsmen. The railroad bridge was set afire, adding to the general confusion.

Japanese troops brought up reinforcements and succeeded in quieting the situation.

London, June 4.—Thirty persons in civilian dress, alleged to be southern nationalist soldiers, were killed when machine gunners started firing immediately after Chang Tso Lin's train had been wrecked at Mukden, Tokio advices to the Exchange Telegraph said today.

(Direct dispatches to the United Press from Mukden said that machine gunners had started shooting at random after the bomb explosion but were quieted after a few skirmishes with Japanese railroad guards. There were no indications of casualties in those clashes.)

Peking, China, June 4.—This northern capital today calmly awaited new developments of the Chinese civil situation—probably the peaceful occupancy of the city by southern nationalist troops.

There have been few demonstrations since Chang Tso Lin, dictator of affairs for the past five years, rode smilingly through the streets in an armored car yesterday and started his retreat back to Manchuria. He had left an interim government in charge and had made arrangements for the gendarmes to maintain order.

Today there was quiet, although it was a quiet mixed with uneasiness as to what the next steps might be. Generals Chang Hsue Hsiang and Yang Yu Ting, remaining of the northern forces that Chang Tso Lin controlled, have decided to maintain their armies at a point 30 miles south of Peking.

It was believed these generals would attempt to convey to the nationalist leaders the demands of the northern residents that a peoples' government be formed.

SAYS REPUBLICANS TO FEEL EFFECT OF FARM BILL VETO

Wright City, Mo., June 4.—(U.P.)—President John F. Case of the Missouri state board of agriculture issued a statement here last night warning that President Coolidge's veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill "may prove devastating to the republican party."

"The matter will not down," he said. "It must be fought out on the convention floors at Kansas City and Houston, and the final message will be written in when the farmers vote next November. 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned,' Shakespeare once said. The republican party may find out that the fury of farmers scorned is devastating." Case is a republican.

SEARCH FOR NOBILE WIDENS, MORE SEARCHING

NEW RESCUE PARTIES TO WORK IN THE NORTHERN REGIONS

DOG TEAMS WITH EXPERT GUIDES STRIKE OUT OVER FROZEN WASTES

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, June 4.—(U.P.)—The search for General Umberto Nobile and his crew of the polar dirigible Italia widened today with arrival of new rescue parties in the northern regions where the Italia is believed to have landed.

Dog teams struck out over the frozen, ice bound territory, guided by expert guides, and will go inland in hopes of rescuing the Italian explorer and his aides who have been missing for 10 days. They have hopes of finding the crew alive—possibly beating back through the trail-less land towards Kings Bay.

The whaler Braganza, chartered by the Italian government, is proceeding north and advised the base here that she had passed Amsterdam Island shortly after midnight.

The vessel reported she was heading eastward from the island but that the ice was becoming more dense. Ice thus far has not blocked the vessel.

Meanwhile other relief expeditions—including the great program planned by the Norwegian government—were understood to be either in the north or starting towards that zone. Some of these expeditions carry airplanes which will be sent out of a central point on scouting tours.

A forlorn note was carried out today when the crew of the Citta Di Milano, the relief vessel, dismantled the big hangar that had been awaiting the return of the dirigible Italia from its cruise to the north pole.

POLICE CHIEFS MEET AT MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis, June 4.—(U.P.)—The sixth annual convention of the Minnesota Police association opened here today for the usual two day meeting. Edward Brick, former St. Cloud chief of police and present association president, occupied the chair.

Speakers included: Attorney General G. A. Youngquist and Frank W. Matson, of the state railroad and warehouse commission.

U. S. MARINE DIES OF SELF-INFLICTED WOUND

Washington, June 4.—(U.P.)—Corporal B. Leonard K. Besch of the American marine forces in Haiti died today of self-inflicted gunshot wounds, the navy department was advised. His father, Max H. Besch, resides at 3033 Minnehaha avenue, Minneapolis.

QUEEN MARIE OF ROUMANIA TO REVISIT AMERICA

Bucharest, Roumania, June 4.—(U.P.)—Queen Marie will revisit the United States within a few months to see friends, she announced today while receiving Leon Fischer, president of the Association of Roumanian Jews in the United States.

MISS EARMART, SKILLED AVIATOR, IN THE PARTY

WEATHER CONDITIONS EXCEL- LENT AS THEY LEFT HALIFAX

NO PREVIOUS ANNOUNCEMENT MADE OF THEIR PLANS

Halifax, N. S., June 4.—(U.P.)—Miss Amelia Earmart of Boston, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon took off at 8:30 A. M. EST, today for Trepassy Bay, Newfoundland, to start their trans-Atlantic flight to England. Weather conditions were excellent.

St. Johns, N. F., June 4.—After a fast flight from Halifax, the seaplane Friendship landed at Trepassy Bay at noon E. S. T. today with Amelia Earhart, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, ready to continue to London.

Halifax, N. S., June 4.—Three persons—including one of America's prominent women aviators—awaited today for favorable weather to start a challenge of the north Atlantic in a flight from Newfoundland to London.

Miss Amelia Earmart, Boston; Wilmer Stultz, at times pilot for Charles A. Levine and once pilot for Mrs. Frances Grayson, and Lew Gordon flew here yesterday from Boston in the big Fokker airplane they had purchased from Commander Richard E. Byrd. The plane is one Byrd had intended using on his south polar expedition this fall.

Without a previous announcement of plans the trio boarded the airplane at Boston yesterday, flew direct to Halifax and started making plans to fly on to Trepassy, 80 miles southwest of St. John's. From there the start to London will be made and it is probable they will fly to Trepassy today.

The Byrd plane is equipped with pontoons and it is understood the purpose of the flight is to further studies in the possibility of regular trans-Atlantic crossings.

The plane is so equipped that it may be able to land on the water should trouble develop.

The harbor at Trepassy is excellent for a water take-off, it was said here. It is wide and the water sufficiently calm so as not to spoil the tri-ling.

When the Fokker machine arrives there it will be equipped with 1,000 gallons of gasoline and prepared for an immediate start. The flyers hope to land in the river Thames.

The plane when fully equipped—including the three pilots, gasoline, food supplies and radio equipment—will weigh approximately 12,000 pounds.

Secrecy surrounded the flight of the Fokker from Boston, when the machine left Boston there was no indication of destination.

There were a number of people here to welcome the plane upon its arrival but it was more than an hour later that Stultz finally confirmed the three were enroute to London.

Boston, June 4.—Miss Amelia Earhart, co-pilot on the projected trans-Atlantic flight from Trepassy, is one of the most experienced women flyers in the United States and has been flying ten years.

At present she is a teacher of flying and director of the Denison airport at Framingham, Mass. She started flying ten years ago in southern California and in 1920—when she was 21 years old—established an altitude record for women at 14,900 feet.

New York, June 4.—The secrecy of the trans-Atlantic flight of the Fokker airplane from Boston was kept so well that Mrs. Wilmer Stultz, who watched the take-off, did not know her husband intended to fly to England.

She said at Mineola, L. I., that she thought her husband was going to Newfoundland in a test flight for Commander Richard E. Byrd.

Meanwhile in New York Byrd confirmed sale of the plane. The plane is understood to have been sold for $60,000.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORIES OF TODAY

Local meteorologists and weather observers were puzzled today to see a true circle rainbow encircling the sun in huge fashion this noon. It was no mere sundog, by any means, but looked like a huge gaudy ring of Saturn.

St. Paul, June 4. — (UP)—Amateur weather prophets, doomsday forecasters and others interested in signs and portents pointed with consternation today to the large, clearly visible circle around the sun.

Government weather men whose knowledge of the sky is all inclusive said the circle, known as a "solar halo" was but of reflection of the sun on the upper clouds.

The world apparently is nowhere near the end.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORIES OF TODAY

Local meteorologists and weather observers were puzzled today to see a true circle rainbow encircling the sun in huge fashion this noon. It was no mere sundog, by any means, but looked like a huge gaudy ring of Saturn.

St. Paul, June 4. — (U.P.)—Amateur weather prophets, doomsday forecasters and others interested in signs and portents pointed with consternation today to the large, clearly visible circle around the sun.

Government weather men whose knowledge of the sky is all inclusive said the circle, known as a "solar halo" was but of reflection of the sun on the upper clouds.

The world apparently is nowhere near the end.

Flategraff-Hanson

A pretty church wedding was solemnized Saturday afternoon, June 2, at 1 o'clock at the Norwegian-Danish Lutheran church when Miss Olga R. Hanson became the bride of Syverin A. Flategraff. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. L. Bolstad who used the Lutheran ring service. They were attended by Oliver Flategraff a brother of the groom and Miss Alma Larson.

The bride wore a gown of blue georgette and bridal veil and carried roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of flower georgette and also carried roses.

Both contracting parties are from Cass county. The groom has for some time been a mail carrier on a rural route from Pine River, and the home of the bride is near Graff.

They are both popular young people who enjoy a host of friends in the community where they have lived.

Mr. and Mrs. Flategraff will make their future home at Pine River.

Mraz-Peterson

This morning at 9 o'clock the Catholic parsonage was the scene of a quiet wedding when Miss Gladys Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Peterson, 410 Pine street, became the bride of Alfred C. Mraz, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Mraz, 613 South Ninth street. The bride wore a gown and hat of orchid georgette with hose and slippers to match and her bridesmaid, Miss Mardelle Mraz, sister of the groom, wore a gown of rose crepe with a hat, hose and slippers to match. The groom was attended by his brother, Gregory Mraz.

They are both well known and popular young people of the city and were both employed at the First National bank. Their many friends join in congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Mraz left directly after the ceremony for Port Arthur and points north for a short trip.

Adams-Maness

Thursday afternoon, May 31, at the Norwegian-Danish Lutheran church Miss Ellen Maness became the bride of Raphael Muri Adams, Rev. O. L. Bolstad officiated with the ring service. # BRAINERD INDEPENDENTS DEFEAT C.-I. ORE DIGGERS

LOCALS PLAY CLEAN BALL

ON SUNDAY

NOT AN ERROR GRACES BRAINERD COLUMN THIS TIME

LOOM, PLAYING FIRST GAME AT THIRD, SHOWS REMARKABLE STRENGTH

The Crosby-Ironton Ore Diggers were defeated by the local team yesterday afternoon on the home field by an 8 to 2 count, in a mighty well played game.

Both teams played nice ball in the field, the only error being made by the Crosby catcher, while the local boys played errorless ball.

Loom, playing his first game at third, got two doubles and a single in five times up, and accepted five chances without a blow. Hurr, Fitzharris and Olson each got two hits, while Peterson got one.

Olson had nine strikeouts and allowed four bases on balls, while Krall had two strike-outs and gave free transportation to two.

Jack Schmidt, manager and first baseman for the Ore Diggers, stated that he had had ball teams on the range for the past fifteen years and that this was the first time he had lost to a Brainerd team, and is especially anxious to play Brainerd a return game on July fourth, when Crosby is to have one of their bigger and better celebrations.

Brainerd goes to Onamia next Sunday to play the strong team of that place. It is reported that Onamia has one of the best pitchers in these parts, and a hard game is expected.

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Jimmy Fox of the Athletics, who hit a home run with two men on in the ninth inning at Comiskey park. However, Ted Lyons relieved Thomas, checked the rally, and the White Sox won, 6 to 5.

The Yankees had an easy time at Detroit again, increasing their lead over the Mackmen by a full game with a 7 to 2 victory. Lou Gehrig's home run in the fifth—his eleventh of the season—was the first hit made off Earl Whitehill, who blew up in the seventh and was replaced by Stoner.

Art Nehi, former Giant, was roughly treated by his ex-mates at the Polo grounds and driven from the box as the Cubs took a 10 to 5 licking.

The Pirates won a stormy fourteen inning battle at Brooklyn, 9 to 7, the fans hurling pop bottles and other missiles at Umpires Reardon, Moran and Wilson. Dissatisfaction with a decision which robbed "Jigger" Stutz of an alleged shoe string catch and allowed two Pirate runs caused the outburst.

The Boston Red Sox moved into fifth place by defeating the Cleveland Indians 4 to 3.

DEFEATS MISS BENNETT IN STRAIGHT SETS

CALIFORNIAN ACCEPTED BY THE FRENCH EXPERTS AS THE GREATEST PLAYER OF DAY

DECLARED TO BE EVEN GREATER THAN MUCH BELOVED SUZANNE LENGLEN

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, June 4. (UP)—Miss Helen Wills of California won the women's singles championship of France today, defeating Miss Eileen Bennett of England in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2.

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, June 4.—Helen Wills of California, who met Eileen Bennett of England in the finals of the women's singles in the French national championship today, has been accepted by tennis experts who have watched her play during the past fortnight, as the greatest woman player in the world.

Rene La Coste and other French stars who have observed Helen in action at Paris now declare her better than their own Suzanne Lenglen.

Christabel Hardie, English girl who was Miss Wills' victim in the semi-finals Sunday, was completely overwhelmed by the fury of the American champion's attack. Realizing that her only chance to make points was to keep the ball in play and leave it to Helen to make the errors, Miss Hardie put up a game but fruitless fight.

Miss Wills refused to meet her opponent at a soft game of exchanges, but forced a terrific pace, hitting like a man, crashing into the English player's soft service with slashing returns, sharply angled across the court.

She kept Miss Hardie constantly on the run, and had to make not more than three or four defensive shots during the match, which was concluded in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

Until Sunday, Miss Wills had been keeping her best game under cover, pointing for the finals. Against Miss Hardy she cut loose. She gave an exhibition no other woman player in the tournament could have approached.

Experts watching Helen yesterday declared they never had seen a woman combine such a perfect game with such a vicious attack.

Mrs. Winslow's SYRUP

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

The New York major league baseball clubs continue to welcome former managers of the St. Louis Cardinals.

In the past twenty years, the Cards have had but six managers and four of them have gone to New York.

Bob O'Farrell, made manager at St. Louis for a single season and then given a $5,000 raise in salary and reduced to the ranks is the latest arrival in Manhattan.

Roger Bresnahan, originally a Giant, managed the Cardinals from 1909 to 1912, and now is with the New York National League club again in the capacity of coach.

Miller Huggins, who succeeded Bresnahan in the Mound City, has proved a tremendous success as manager of the Yankees.

Rogers Hornsby, who led Sam Breadon's club to its first pennant and world's championship in 1926, went to the Giants the following year and captained the club during its unsuccessful pennant drive last season.

The transfer of O'Farrell to the Giants gave the lie to John McGraw's face-saving assertion that "Shanty" Hogan was a capably first string major league catcher. When Hornsby was sent to the Boston Braves in exchange for Hogan and Welch, a trade which still puzzles the baseball world despite a plethora of explanations, the Giant's manager insisted that "Shanty" was the man he wanted behind the bat.

This spring an opportunity presented itself for New York to obtain the services of O'Farrell. McGraw called Hogan aside and asked him to which club he preferred to be traded. With tears in his honest Irish eyes, "Shanty" professed allegiance to the Giants.

"All right, me boy," said McGraw, "you stay with us."
The Giants' manager then announced that O'Farrell would assist Hogan behind the bat. It has been noticeable, however, that O'Farrell's "assistance" consisted of catching most of the games. Despite his announcement, McGraw is too smart a manager to keep a catcher like O'Farrell on the bench.

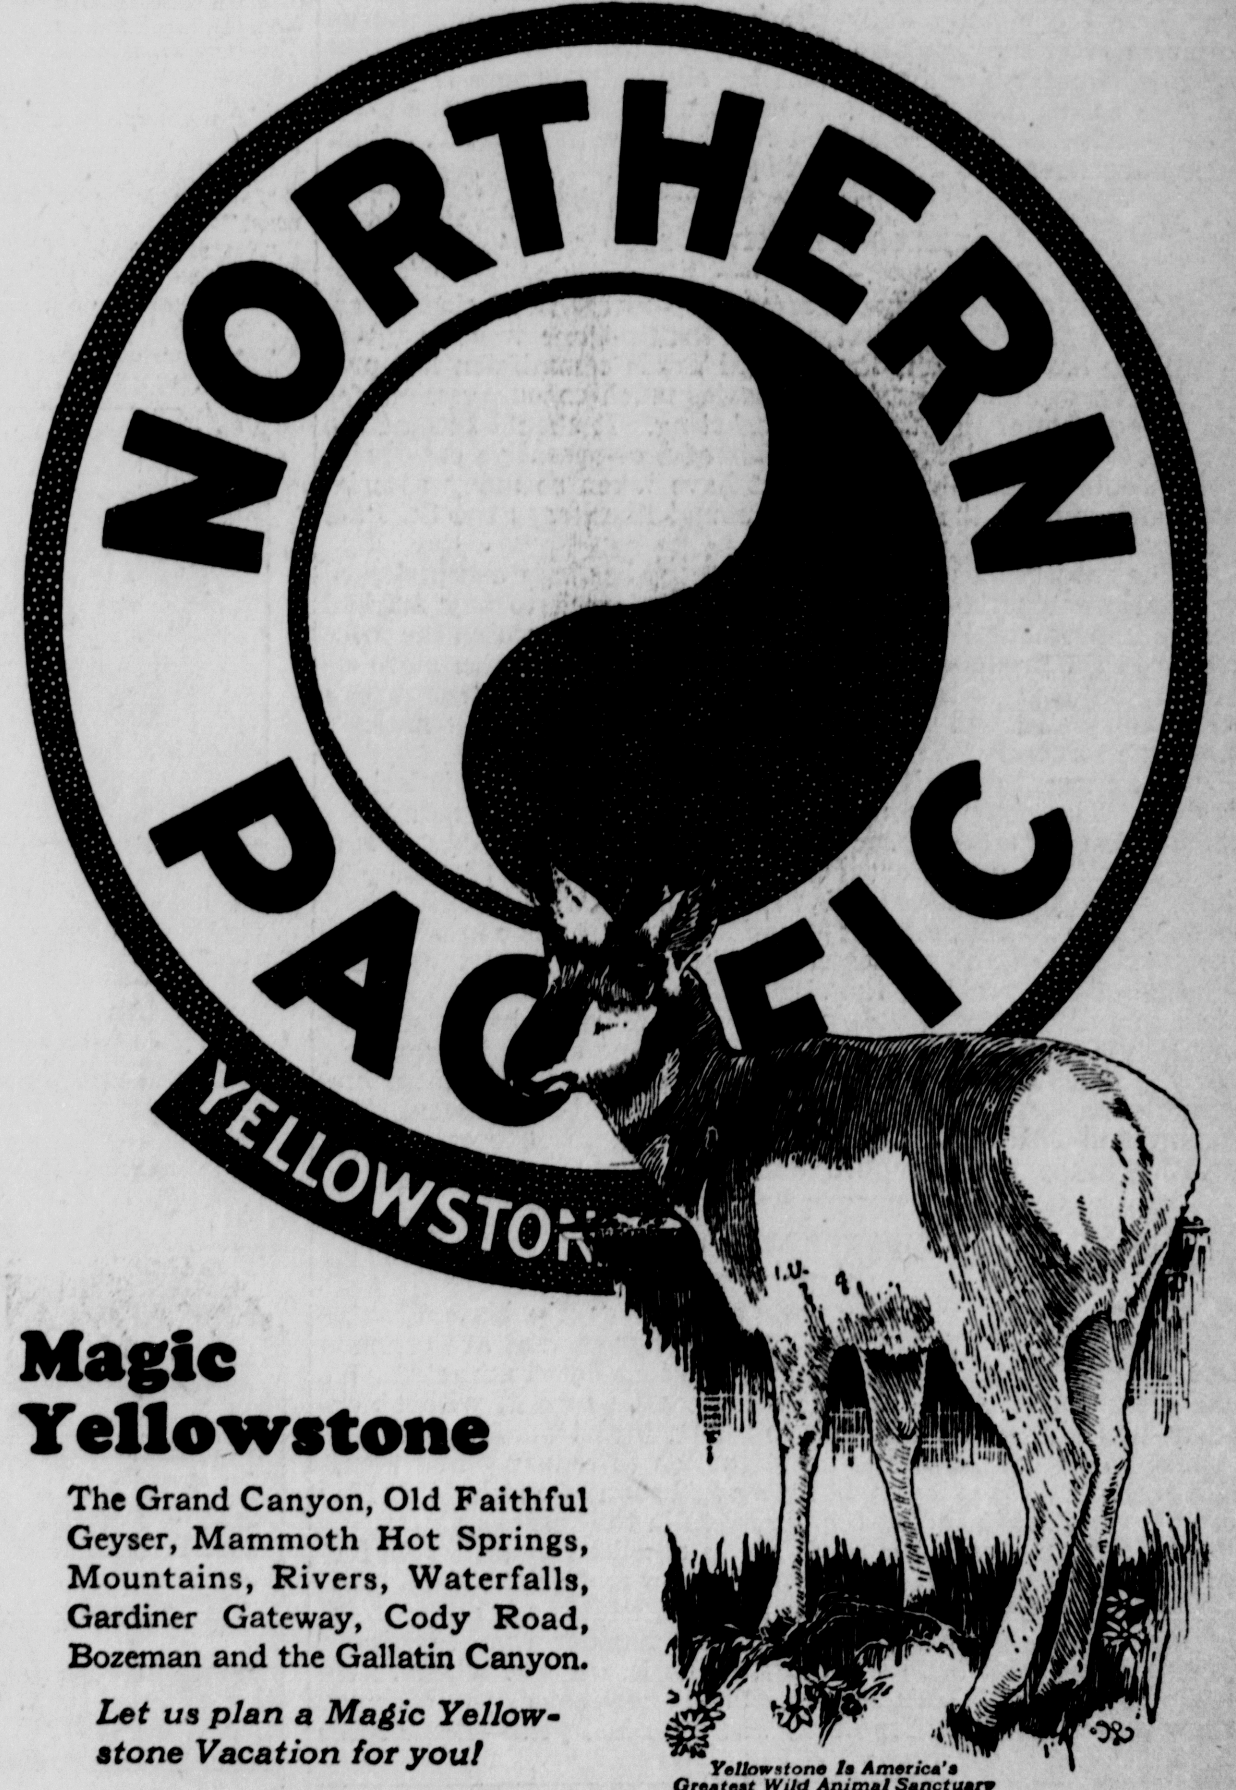

Miller Huggins, of course, has been the most phenomenally successful of former Cardinal pilots. The Yankees have won five pennants in ten seasons under the midjet manager's leadership.

Rogers Hornsby proved as great a success with the Giants as he was with St. Louis. He was such a success, in fact, that the club had to get rid of him, for he knew more baseball than his bosses.

As predicted, the Boston-New York trade was a prelude to the appointment of "The Rajah" as manager of the Braves. Jack Slater was deposited last month, and Rogers put in his place. A sudden rise in Braves' stock can be expected at any time now.

The change in management of the Boston club was a tough break for Slater, but was inevitable. Hornsby did his best to fit into the scheme of things outlined by Judge Emil Fuchs, the club owner, but it was no use. A ball player with Hornsby's brains and knowledge of the National League hardly could be expected to remain subordinate to a manager who knew absolutely nothing about modern major league baseball.

BRAINERD INDEPENDENTS DEFEAT C.-I. ORE DIGGERS

LOCALS PLAY CLEAN BALL ON SUNDAY

NOT AN ERROR GRACES BRAINERD COLUMN THIS TIME

LOOM, PLAYING FIRST GAME AT THIRD, SHOWS REMARKABLE STRENGTH

The Crosby-Ironton Ore Diggers were defeated by the local team yesterday afternoon on the home field by an 8 to 2 count, in a mighty well played game.

Both teams played nice ball in the field, the only error being made by the Crosby catcher, while the local boys played errorless ball.

Loom, playing his first game at third, got two doubles and a single in five times up, and accepted five chances without a blow. Hurr, Fitzharris and Olson each got two hits, while Peterson got one.

Olson had nine strikeouts and allowed four bases on balls, while Krall had two strike-outs and gave free transportation to two.

Jack Schmidt, manager and first baseman for the Ore Diggers, stated that he had had ball teams on the range for the past fifteen years and that this was the first time he had lost to a Brainerd team, and is especially anxious to play Brainerd a return game on July fourth, when Crosby is to have one of their bigger and better celebrations.

Brainerd goes to Onamia next Sunday to play the strong team of that place. It is reported that Onamia has one of the best pitchers in these parts, and a hard game is expected.

The following is the box score:

Watching the Scoreboard

Yesterday's Hero—Jimmy Fox of the Athletics, who hit a home run with two men on in the ninth inning at Comiskey park. However, Ted Lyons relieved Thomas, checked the rally, and the White Sox won, 6 to 5.

The Yankees had an easy time at Detroit again, increasing their lead over the Mackmen by a full game with a 7 to 2 victory. Lou Gehrig's home run in the fifth—his eleventh of the season—was the first hit made off Earl Whitehill, who blew up in the seventh and was replaced by Stoner. Art Nehf, former Giant, was roughly treated by his ex-mates at the Polo grounds and driven from the box as the Cubs took a 10 to 5 licking.

The Pirates won a stormy fourteen inning battle at Brooklyn, 9 to 7, the fans hurling pop bottles and other missiles at Umpires Reardon, Moran and Wilson. Dissatisfaction with a decision which robbed "Jigger" Stutz of an alleged shoe string catch and allowed two Pirate runs caused the outburst.

The Boston Red Sox moved into fifth place by defeating the Cleveland Indians 4 to 3.

DEFEATS MISS BENNETT IN STRAIGHT SETS

CALIFORNIAN ACCEPTED BY THE FRENCH EXPERTS AS THE GREATEST PLAYER OF DAY

DECLARED TO BE EVEN GREATER THAN MUCH BELOVED SUZANNE LENGLEN

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, June 4.—(UP)—Miss Helen Wills of California won the women's singles championship of France today, defeating Miss Eileen Bennett of England in straight sets, 6-1, 6-2.

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, June 4.—Helen Wills of California, who met Eileen Bennett of England in the finals of the women's singles in the French national championship today, has been accepted by tennis experts who have watched her play during the past fortnight, as the greatest woman player in the world.

Rene La Coste and other French stars who have observed Helen in action at Paris now declare her better than their own Suzanne Lenglen.

Christabel Hardie, English girl who was Miss Wills' victim in the semi-finals Sunday, was completely overwhelmed by the fury of the American champion's attack. Realizing that her only chance to make points was to keep the ball in play and leave it to Helen to make the errors, Miss Hardie put up a game but fruitless fight.

Miss Wills refused to meet her opponent at a soft game of exchanges, but forced a terrific pace, hitting like a man, crashing into the English player's soft service with slashing returns, sharply angled across the court.

She kept Miss Hardie constantly on the run, and had to make not more than three or four defensive shots during the match, which was concluded in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

Until Sunday, Miss Wills had been keeping her best game under cover, pointing for the finals. Against Miss Hardie she cut loose. She gave an exhibition no other woman player in the tournament could have approached.

Experts watching Helen yesterday declared they never had seen a woman combine such a perfect game with such a vicious attack.

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)
The New York major league baseball clubs continue to welcome former managers of the St. Louis Cardinals.

In the past twenty years, the Cards have had but six managers and four of them have gone to New York.

Bob O'Farrell, made manager at St. Louis for a single season and then given a $5,000 raise in salary and reduced to the ranks is the latest arrival in Manhattan.

Roger Brennhagen, originally a Giant, managed the Cardinals from 1909 to 1912, and now is with the New York National League club again in the capacity of coach.

Miller Huggins, who succeeded Brennhagen in the Mound City, has proved a tremendous success as manager of the Yankees.

Rogers Hornsby, who led Sam Breadon's club to its first pennant and world's championship in 1926, went to the Giants the following year and captained the club during its unsuccessful pennant drive last season.

The transfer of O'Farrell to the Giants gave the lie to John McGraw's face-saving assertion that "Shanty" Hogan was a capably first string major league catcher. When Hornsby was sent to the Boston Braves in exchange for Hogan and Welch, a trade which still puzzles the baseball world despite a plethora of explanations, the Giant's manager insisted that "Shanty" was the man he wanted behind the bat.

ful of former Cardinal pilots. The Yankees have won five pennants in ten seasons' under the midget manager's leadership.

THE HOME TOWN NEWSPAPER

As reported by the Associated Press, covering the Memphis, Tenn., convention of the National Editorial Association, no publication carries greater interest and greater influence to the rising generation than the home town newspaper. This assertion was made by Charles M. Meredith, editor of the Quakertown, Pa., Free Press, in his president's message to the thirty-third annual convention of the National Editorial association.

"Every editor and publisher should be an outstanding factor in making his community what it is or what it should be and the time is here when communities, towns and cities are largely judged by the character of the newspapers which represent them," he said.

Mr. Meredith warned his fellow editors "not to be robber of tranquility" through fear of consequences if they publish the truth pertaining to the welfare of their communities but urged them to strive at all times to keep their columns free of "questionable politics and questionable advertising." Advocate strict observance of the law and thereby promote the highest ideals possible, he said.

The National Editorial association represents newspapers read daily and weekly by about 30,000,000 persons throughout the United States. More than 300 editors were at the convention.

And here is another opinion on the value of the country weeklies and small city dailies and the influence they exert. The Woodburn, Oregon, Weekly Independent states that Arthur Brisbane, syndicate editorial writer for many large daily newspapers, has come to take the same view of the relative influence of the smaller newspapers, sending out this in his daily editorial service: "The smaller newspapers of the country are the most important newspapers, and incidentally, in proportion to their circulation, their advertising results are the biggest, and their advertising rates are the smallest in the country. They are read through from end to end. Every copy of circulation means an entire family, not a family that lives in one room with a can opener, but a family that owns its own house, and land around it, at least ninety times out of a hundred; a family that buys everything, from the roof on the house, to the cement on the cellar floor; from the hat on mother's head to the shoes on the boys' feet. The service that their publishers render to the public is, in my opinion, the most important service rendered by any class of citizens in the United States. The country editors are distributors of information; they reach the minds of the boys that leave the farms, and they are the nation's mental police force."

After half a century in the publication of newspapers, daily and weekly, the writer can endorse the opinion of Arthur Brisbane that the country paper is read from end to end and the advertisements are of special interest. Where a hundred read all that is in the home weekly, only one in that hundred peruses all that is in the big-city daily paper than comes to them. Large foreign advertisers are also becoming cognizant of the fact that space in country weekly and smaller city daily papers is of real value to them; that they can gain more at less cost, at the same time securing as much combined circulation with a certainty that their advertisements will be read by all.

THE CO-OPERATIVE'S NEED

SCANNING the history of farmers' co-operative marketing associations in the United States since the first one was organized in 1810 to handle butter, the Federal Trade commission has produced a two-volume report that carries much encouragement for the proponents of this form of marketing. It should become the handbook of every leader or director of a co-operative enterprise if he would avoid the pitfalls that have taken so many associations and conduct the business on sound lines, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The report holds that while much good has been accomplished by local organizations, they have not functioned to any marked degree in promotion of orderly marketing or determining the price return to the producer. It finds large-scale co-operation more effective, and it regards these as yet in an evolutionary stage, which when completed will become an important part in the nation's economic structure.

The present difficulty for these larger co-operatives is lack of capital. The commission holds that a co-operative enterprise should plan for a deficit for the first two years if it hopes to survive. Lack of capital forces the managers to sell to pay the producer, who cannot wait for his money. What, with capital, might be made into a "sellers' market" is for lack of it made into a "buyers' market" with all the losses consequent on dumping. Given a solution of this problem, the other difficulties of efficient management and loyal membership will, the commission believes, solve themselves. Even with this handicap, co-operatives in livestock, dairy products and fruits have saved money to their members, while grain, cotton and egg associations have broken even. The commission affirms the soundness of co-operation economically, pointing to the need of capital to make it sound financially.

ROADS FOR NEXT WINTER

In good roads, as in so many other ways, the United States leads the world. The splendid, safe highways that are common to us, would in many other countries be considered miracles. We can cross entire states, and go from coast to coast, without encountering dangerous roads. No public investment pays better. A city with good streets is an attraction to industry and home-seekers; and this is also true of town and country roads. But how often do we fail in caring for the roads in the seasons ahead.

In summer, when the roads are in excellent condition we forget that winter is just ahead with its snow and drifts. The trials of the motorist and teamster in the past winter are entirely out of our minds in the enjoyment of the summer time highways. Morrison county should have learned its lesson last winter. We truly hope it did. Let's not wait until snow comes to order our snow plows and snow fences as was done last year.—Little Falls Transcript.

Friday is circus day, the day the Christy Circus gives their great exhibition and every child from seven to seventy-seven is planning to attend one of the performances. The special trains of the circus will arrive at dawn, and the unloading of this mystic caravan is done in almost the twinkling of an eye so perfect is the system. The first tent erected on the lot is the cook and dining tent, and here every one of the 860 employees get their meals and a curious crowd is always on hand to see this army cat.

The huge menagerie tent is next erected, and then comes the big top, and the other fifteen tents, covering over seven acres of ground, follow in quick succession, all of which are necessary for the amusement of the public and the convenience of the employees.

THE HOME TOWN NEWSPAPER

As reported by the Associated Press, covering the Memphis, Tenn., convention of the National Editorial Association, no publication carries greater interest and greater influence to the rising generation than the home town newspaper. This assertion was made by Charles M. Meredith, editor of the Quakertown, Pa., Free Press, in his president's message to the forty-third annual convention of the National Editorial association.

"Every editor and publisher should be an outstanding factor in making his community what it is or what it should be and the time is here when communities, towns and cities are largely judged by the character of the newspapers which represent them," he said.

Mr. Meredith warned his fellow editors "not to be robber of tranquility" through fear of consequences if they publish the truth pertaining to the welfare of their communities but urged them to strive at all times to keep their columns free of "questionable politics and questionable advertising." Advocate strict observance of the law and thereby promote the highest ideals possible, he said.

The National Editorial association represents newspapers read daily and weekly by about 30,000,000 persons throughout the United States. More than 300 editors were at the convention.

And here is another opinion on the value of the country weeklies and small city dailies and the influence they exert. The Woodburn, Oregon, Weekly Independent states that Arthur Brisbane, syndicate editorial writer for many large daily newspapers, has come to take the same view of the relative influence of the smaller newspapers, sending out this in his daily editorial service: "The smaller newspapers of the country are the most important newspapers, and incidentally, in proportion to their circulation, their advertising results are the biggest, and their advertising rates are the smallest in the country. They are read through from end to end. Every copy of circulation means an entire family, not a family that lives in one room with a can opener, but a family that owns its own house, and land around it, at least ninety times out of a hundred; a family that buys everything, from the roof on the house, to the cement on the cellar floor; from the hat on mother's head to the shoes on the boys' feet. The service that their publishers render to the public is, in my opinion, the most important service rendered by any class of citizens in the United States. The country editors are distributors of information; they reach the minds of the boys that leave the farms, and they are the nation's mental police force."

After half a century in the publication of newspapers, daily and weekly, the writer can endorse the opinion of Arthur Brisbane that the country paper is read from end to end and the advertisements are of special interest. Where a hundred read all that is in the home weekly, only one in that hundred peruses all that is in the big-city daily paper than comes to them. Large foreign advertisers are also becoming cognizant of the fact that space in country weekly and smaller city daily papers is of real value to them; that they can gain more at less cost, at the same time securing as much combined circulation with a certainty that their advertisements will be read by all.

THE CO-OPERATIVE'S NEED

SCANNING the history of farmers' co-operative marketing associations in the United States since the first one was organized in 1810 to handle butter, the Federal Trade commission has produced a two-volume report that carries much encouragement for the proponents of this form of marketing. It should become the handbook of every leader or director of a co-operative enterprise if he would avoid the pitfalls that have taken so many associations and conduct the business on sound lines, says the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The report holds that while much good has been accomplished by local organizations, they have not functioned to any marked degree in promotion of orderly marketing or determining the price return to the producer. It finds large-scale co-operation more effective, and it regards these as yet in an evolutionary stage, which when completed will become an important part in the nation's economic structure.

The present difficulty for these larger co-operatives is lack of capital. The commission holds that a co-operative enterprise should plan for a deficit for the first two years if it hopes to survive. Lack of capital forces the managers to sell to pay the producer, who cannot wait for his money. What, with capital, might be made into a "sellers' market" is for lack of it made into a "buyers' market" with all the losses consequent on dumping. Given a solution of this problem, the other difficulties of efficient management and loyal membership will, the commission believes, solve themselves. Even with this handicap, co-operatives in livestock, dairy products and fruits have saved money to their members, while grain, cotton and egg associations have broken even. The commission affirms the soundness of co-operation economically, pointing to the need of capital to make it sound financially.

ROADS FOR NEXT WINTER

IN good roads, as in so many other ways, the United States leads the world. The splendid, safe highways that are common to us, would in many other countries be considered miracles. We can cross entire states, and go from coast to coast, without encountering dangerous roads. No public investment pays better. A city with good streets is an attraction to industry and home-seekers; and this is also true of town and country roads. But how often do we fail in caring for the roads in the seasons ahead.

In summer, when the roads are in excellent condition we forget that winter is just ahead with its snow and drifts. The trials of the motorist and teamster in the past winter are entirely out of our minds in the enjoyment of the summer time highways. Morrison county should have learned its lesson last winter. We truly hope it did. Let's not wait until snow comes to order our snow plows and snow fences as was done last year—Little Falls Transcript.

CHRISTY BROS.
CIRCUS TO BE HERE FRIDAY

Mammoth Parade to be Staged at Noon—Highly Trained Animals and a Galaxy of Lovely Stars

Friday is circus day, the day the Christy Circus gives their great exhibition and every child from seven to seventy-seven is planning to attend one of the performances. The big canopied tents are sure to be packed to capacity as the weather man has promised to do all in his power to make the day a success, and has ordered a clear sunny day.

The special trains of the circus will arrive at dawn, and the unloading of this mystic caravan is done in almost the twinkling of an eye so perfect is the system. The first tent erected on the lot is the cook and dining tent, and here every one of the 860 employees get their meals and a curious crowd is always on hand to see this army eat.

The huge menagerie tent is next erected, and then comes the big top, and the other fifteen tents, covering over seven acres of ground, follow in quick succession, all of which are necessary for the amusement of the public and the convenience of the employees.

Lowden has 200 votes, he declared, and the invisible strength in the uninstructed one-third of the delegates will be sufficient to swing the nomination to the dirt farmer from Illinois, said Buck.

FIGHT EIGHT SUNDAY

Twenty-five Men Successfully Combat Flames in Mill Yard Slab Pile

Absence of humidity in the air yesterday brought about a new fire hazard but speedy discovery of small fires prevented any serious damage, reported E. H. Rhodes, district forest ranger who announced that practically all the fires were under control today.

A fire which started in the slab and saw dust pile of the mill yard owned by Tony Bolke at Nisswa yesterday morning was put out by 25 fire fighters before the flames could spread to the nearby woods.

Other fires reported were: 25 acres burned over in section 10, Clough township, Morrison county; 30 acres burned over in section 31, Ansel township, Cass county; 100 acres burned over in section 7, Bungo township, Cass county; 10 acres burned over in section 13, Moose Lake township, Cass county; 200 acres burned over in Maple township, Cass county; 10 acres burned over in section 6, Center township, Crow Wing county; 20 acres burning over in section 31, Crow Wing township, Crow Wing county.

"Yesterday was the most hazardous day for fires we have had this season. There was no humidity in the air. Serious fires may have broken out had it not been for the fact that all vegetation is green at this time," said Mr. Rhodes.

Twenty-five Men Successfully Combat
Flames in Mill Yard
Slab Pile

Absence of humidity in the air yesterday brought about a new fire hazard but speedy discovery of small fires prevented any serious damage, reported E. H. Rhodes, district forester who announced that practically all the fires were under control today.

A fire which started in the slab and saw dust pile of the mill yard owned by Tony Bolke at Nisswa yesterday morning was put out by 25 fire fighters before the flames could spread to the nearby woods.

Other fires reported were: 25 acres burned over in section 10, Clough township, Morrison county; 30 acres burned over in section 31, Ansel township, Cass county; 100 acres burned over in section 7, Bungo township, Cass county; 10 acres burned over in section 13, Moose Lake township, Cass county; 200 acres burned over in Maple township, Cass county; 10 acres burned over in section 6, Center township, Crow Wing county; 20 acres burning over in section 31, Crow Wing township, Crow Wing county.

"Yesterday was the most hazardous day for fires we have had this season. There was no humidity in the air. Serious fires may have broken out had it not been for the fact that all vegetation is green at this time," said Mr. Rhodes.

GLORIOUS BETSY

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS

Captain Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, falls in love with the beautiful Betsy Patterson on a visit to America. Against the advice of his suite he marries her. They sail for France to brave the anger of Napoleon. Betsy is refused permission to land and while Jerome is about to leave the ship to plead anew with his brother a small tug comes alongside. The Emperor has come in person to command Betsy to give up Jerome. Heart-broken, Betsy watches her husband go off with Napoleon. She returns to Baltimore where the well-meaning pity of her friends is almost more than she can bear.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

The new moon was high in the sky, brilliant and lovely and young. The lights from nearby houses sent out a soft glow. Along the shaded, quiet streets a man and a girl walked slowly, arm in arm, his head bent down close to hers. Through the trees the fireflies waved uncertainly like tiny lamps suspended in midair from unseen strings. A carriage rolled past, the sound of the horses' hoofbeats clattering on the hard, dusty road.

Finally he stirred.

Betsy sighed. "Even those sounds seem a part of my dream. Do you remember how I sat at the spinnet singing 'The Maid of Athens' just before—before he came? Oh, I would give the world to hear his voice again. Oh, Jerome, Jerome!" She leaned her head on Mary's shoulder and stared out into the night.

CHAPTER XVII

To one side of the room was a small settee on which he usually lounged when dictating to his secretary, when he was not moving nervously about the room. Two tall bookcases filled with histories, geographies and the Greek and Roman classics stood side by side. The only decorations in this simple apartment were the pair of chandeliers on a console table, and the bust of Frederick the Great. The heavy velvet drapes and portieres were embroidered with a simple insignia, the initial N.

A clock in the corridor struck ten. The clanking of heavy boots sounded in the hallway. A light rap came at the door like a slight scratching sound. And then a guard threw back the portal and announced: "Sir, your brother, Jerome!"

The man at the table did not move. He remained unheeding of his visitor who stood in the doorway watching him anxiously, still absorbed in his colorful pins and the great map. Finally, he stirred; threw back his shoulders to stretch them; yawned, and picked up a small bell from the table. He sounded it abruptly and then silenced it. The guard closed the door and left Jerome with the Emperor.

"Sir," Jerome stepped forward impulsively, as Napoleon rose and embraced his youngest brother. "Thank Heaven, you have sent for me at last. I feel as if I were a prisoner."

"So! How are you? How did you leave Mamma? Was your journey pleasant?" His questions were shot out quickly with no rejoinder to his brother's statement.

"Mamma is well. She is still playing reversal with her friends in the evening," Jerome responded. "And you, Sir, you are well?" "Yes, very well, but I am getting fat." He patted the white waistcoat, but his eyes were studying his brother's face. "I am afraid I shall get fatter still. My stomach bothers me little now."

Jerome waited impatiently for the end of these trifling personalities, hoping to receive some definite information as to why he had been recalled from his mother's home in the Trianon where he had been sent for safe keeping so many weary months ago. But Napoleon did not yet seem ready to talk.

"Sit down," the Emperor motioned his brother to a chair across the table. He seated himself and took a pinch of snuff from the silver case at his right hand, studying the young man opposite him. They sat there, Napoleon twisting the colored pins about in his fingers until Jerome could no longer contain the question that was on his lips.

"Sir," he began. "Why have you sent for me? Have you forgiven me my rebellion against you?"

Again that silence, broken only by the ticking of the clock in the corridor. The heavy curtains excluded any outside sounds. Suddenly Napoleon swept the pins aside with the flat of his hand.

"You may have my forgiveness whenever you like," he spoke abruptly, lifting his head suddenly to stare piercingly at his brother. "It depends entirely upon yourself." "Upon myself," Jerome repeated. "But how? I have already said that I would do everything that I feel could be done by a gentleman of honor, but if you mean that my wife—"

"Your wife," Napoleon interrupted angrily, his gimlet eyes boring straight through Jerome as though he would read his innermost mind. "Why do you persist in speaking of your wife when you know quite well that you have no wife. If you allude to Mademoiselle Patterson, she is not, and never will be, your wife. I refuse to recognize her as such. Your marriage is no more valid in France than if you had never even seen this girl. No marriage in the Emperor's family is valid without the consent of the Emperor."

"Your Majesty, you are speaking of my wife!" Jerome jumped to his feet and faced his brother across the table. "You may force your laws upon others, but not upon me."

"Enough," Napoleon cried. "I do not wish to hear any more of this. Do you owe me no gratitude? Have I not done everything for you? Have I not protected you; taught you? Are you an unnatural brother that you would defy me in this one small thing, I demand of you? Listen to me and weigh my words carefully. Unless you obey me, punishment, poverty—exile!" He arose and began pacing up and down the room, a heavy frown caught between his eyes. He stopped occasionally to extract a pinch of snuff from the silver case, his hand trembling nervously. Finally he stepped in front of Jerome, his anger dying down, his eyes growing soft and kind as they rested on this, his youngest and his favorite brother.

"We are alone here," Napoleon spoke kindly. "No one can hear us. Perhaps I am wrong to slander your marriage with Mademoiselle Patterson. Knowing your willfulness as I do—knowing how headstrong you are—knowing your self-love for everything depends on self-love which regards itself as a virtue, just as we Princes dignify by the name of policy everything which turns on our passions—I ought not to interfere with you. I have no disrespect for your wife, but I defeat her because she has robbed me of my dearest brother."

"But I love her, Sir," Jerome answered morosely. "Then you would sacrifice yourself, her, the children you may have, to this selfish passion of yours," Napoleon questioned craftily. "For I warn you, I will never give my consent to this union, and without my consent she can never be recognized as your wife, nor can your offspring come within the realm of succession."

"Only in France," Jerome continued. "You do not yet hold dominion over the entire world."

"Good God, would you drive me to madness!" The Emperor reached for his snuff, spilling it from his nervous fingers. He strode up and down, up and down, twisting his hands behind his back, and chin sunk on his breast.

"What do you mean," he began finally. "What is it that interests you?"

"I am anxious only to act the part of a man of honor—to return to my wife," Jerome informed him, growing desperate as the interview seemed more and more to enrage his brother.

"But politics, brothers! Do politics mean nothing to you?" Napoleon demanded. "You can be a king. I will place in your hands a great work when you rule over the new kingdom of Westphalia."

GLORIOUS BETSY

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS

Captain Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon, falls in love with the bewitching Betsy Patterson on a visit to America. Against the advice of his wife he marries her. They sail for France to brave the anger of Napoleon. Betsy is refused permission to land and while Jerome is about to leave the ship to plead anew with his brother a small tug comes alongside. The Emperor has come in person to command Betsy to give up Jerome. Heartbroken, Betsy watches her husband go off with Napoleon. She returns to Baltimore where the well-meaning pity of her friends is almost more than she can bear.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

The new moon was high in the sky, brilliant and lovely and young. The lights from nearby houses sent out a soft glow. Along the shaded, quiet streets a man and a girl walked slowly, arm in arm, his head bent down close to hers. Through the trees the fireflies waved uncertainly like tiny lamps suspended in midair from unseen strings. A carriage rolled past, the sound of the horses' hoofbeats clattering on the hard, dusty road.

Finally he stirred.

Betsy sighed. "Even those sounds seem a part of my dream. Do you remember how I sat at the spinnet singing 'The Maid of Athens' just before—before he came? Oh, I would give the world to hear his voice again. Oh, Jerome, Jerome!" She leaned her head on Mary's shoulder and stared out into the night.

CHAPTER XVII

To one side of the room was a small settee on which he usually lounged when dictating to his secretary. When he was not moving nervously about the surface of the map, sticking them here and there and watching intently each move that he made. The heavy, receding brow was wrinkled in a deep frown. The belligerent round chin was thrust forward until the lips pouted heavily. By the hour he played this game of chess with the seared battleground of the world as his opponent.

A clock in the corridor struck ten. The clanking of heavy boots sounded in the hallway. A light rap came at the door like a slight scratching sound. And then a guard threw back the portal and announced: "Sir, your brother, Jerome!"

The man at the table did not move. He remained unheeded of his visitor who stood in the doorway watching him anxiously, still absorbed in his colorful pins and the great map. Finally, he stirred; threw back his shoulders to stretch them; yawned, and picked up a small bell from the table. He sounded it abruptly and then silenced it. The guard closed the door and left Jerome with the Emperor.

"Sir," Jerome stepped forward impulsively, as Napoleon rose and embraced his youngest brother. "Thank Heaven, you have sent for me at last. I feel as if I were a prisoner."

"So! How are you? How did you leave Mamma? Was your journey pleasant?" His questions were shot out quickly with no rejoinder to the brother's statement.

"Mamma is well. She is still playing reversi with her friends in the evening," Jerome responded.

"And you, Sir, you are well?" "Yes, very well, but I am getting fat." He patted the white waistcoat, but his eyes were studying his brother's face. "I am afraid I shall get fatter still. My stomach bothers me little now."

Jerome waited impatiently for the end of these trifling personalities, hoping to receive some definite information as to why he had been recalled from his mother's home in the Trianon where he had been sent for safe keeping so many weary months ago. But Napoleon did not yet seem ready to talk.

"Sit down," the Emperor motioned his brother to a chair across the table. He seated himself and took a pinch of snuff from the silver case at his right hand, studying the young man opposite him. They sat there, Napoleon twisting the colored pins about in his fingers until Jerome could no longer contain the question that was on his lips.

"Sir," he began. "Why have you sent for me? Have you forgiven me my rebellion against you?" Again that silence, broken only by the ticking of the clock in the corridor. The heavy curtains excluded any outside sounds. Suddenly Napoleon swept the pins aside with the flat of his hand.

"You may have my forgiveness whenever you like," he spoke abruptly, lifting his head suddenly to stare piercingly at his brother. "It depends entirely upon yourself."

"Upon myself," Jerome repeated. "But how? I have already said that I would do everything that I feel could be done by a gentleman of honor, but if you mean that my wife—"

"Your wife," Napoleon interrupted angrily, his gimlet eyes boring straight through Jerome as though he would read his innermost mind. "Why do you persist in speaking of your wife when you know quite well that you have no wife. If you allude to Mademoiselle Patterson, she is not, and never will be, your wife. I refuse to recognize her as such. Your marriage is no more valid in France than if you had never even seen this girl. No marriage in the Emperor's family is valid without the consent of the Emperor."

"Your Majesty, you are speaking of my wife!" Jerome jumped to his feet and faced his brother across the table. "You may force your laws upon others, but not upon me."

"Enough," Napoleon cried. "I do not wish to hear any more of this. Do you owe me no gratitude? Have I not done everything for you? Have I not protected you; taught you? Are you a man's brother that you would defy me in this one small thing, I demand of you? Listen to me and weigh my words carefully. Unless you obey me—banishment, poverty—exile!"

He arose and began pacing up and down the room, a heavy frown caught between his eyes. He stopped occasionally to extract a pinch of snuff from the silver case, his hand trembling nervously. Finally he stopped in front of Jerome, his anger dying down, his eyes growing soft and kind as they rested on this, his youngest and his favorite brother.

"We are alone here," Napoleon spoke kindly. "No one can hear us. Perhaps I am wrong to slander your marriage with Mademoiselle Patterson. Knowing your willfulness as I do—knowing how headstrong you are—knowing your self-love—for everything depends on self-love which regards itself as a virtue, just as we Princes dignify by the name of policy everything which turns on our passions—I ought not to interfere with you. I have no disrespect for your wife, but I detest her because she has robbed me of my dearest brother."

"But I love her, Sir," Jerome answered morosely. "Then you would sacrifice yourself, her, the children you may have, to this selfish passion of yours," Napoleon questioned craftily. "For I warn you, I will never give my consent to this union, and without my consent she can never be recognized as your wife, nor can your offspring come within the right of succession."

"Only in France," Jerome continued. "You do not yet hold dominion over the entire world."

"Good God, would you drive me to madness?" The Emperor reached for his snuff, spilling it from his nervous fingers. He strode up and down, up and down, twisting his hands behind his back, and chin sunk on his breast.

"What do you mean," he began finally. "What is it that interests you?"

"I am anxious only to act the part of a man of honor—to return to my wife," Jerome informed him, growing desperate as the interview seemed more and more to enrage his brother.

"But politics, brother! Do politics mean nothing to you?" Napoleon demanded. "You can be a king. I will place in your hands a great work when you rule over the new kingdom of Westphalia."
